FOREWORD

It is encouraging to note the progress which the study of genealogy has made within the last decade, which may be said to mark an epoch in the family history of New England. Books like those which Mr. Pope has compiled are invaluable as aids to this study, since they furnish important clues to the genealogist, which he could not obtain except by long research in public and private archives alone familiar to experts like Mr. Pope.

The Pioneers of Maine and New Hampshire aims to give such particulars as are accessible of the founders of these states, and, in many cases, all the particulars which exist; many, it is true, most meagre; but any one who has sought through scores of obscure registers and volumes difficult to reach, knows what the finding of a single name sometimes means to him, for it often settles a mooted point which nothing else can do.

An examination of "The Pioneers" will convince students of the extent and value of Mr. Pope's researches, and insure him their gratitude. These students are not at all confined to New England, but are scattered over the entire Union, for it is in our old colonial settlements that the roots of American Family History are to be found.

Brackets, [ ], are used in two ways: 1. They enclose the authority or source of a statement, or a reference to some book or document which may well be read in the connection. 2. They are also used to enclose words or statements which are believed to be correct, but for which the writer has not found absolute documentary evidence.

SPECIAL DIRECTIONS FOR SEARCHERS

1. Observe many variations of surnames. One must sometimes look on several pages before discovering a desired name. Not only did public recorders vary the orthography, but a man sometimes spelled his own name in two or more ways.

2. Always consult the other names mentioned in an article and the Index of Other Names.

3. Note the Abbreviations employed, since many lines of original record have sometimes been compressed into one word or line in this volume.

4. The source from which a statement has been drawn can be inferred in most cases from its nature; as proprietorship and town office from town records; church membership, dismission, etc., from those of the churches; purchase and sale of lands from county Records of Deeds; depositions, giving age, etc., from records or files of the Courts or Colonies; designations of trade, occupation or social position were usually given in deeds, but sometimes in records of admission to churches; wills and administrations of estates in Probate Records or those of the County or Colony. When an item was found in an unusual place, the source has been noted.

5. The dates are given as they were recorded. March 25 was New Year's Day in England and her colonies in the seventeenth century. It is at once a blunder and a crime to alter such dates to suit a calendar which our Forefathers did not use. Their "style" was just exactly "old style," not at all "new." From January 1 to March 25, during which some other nations used the new year number, they often wrote a double date; as "3 February, 1621-2"; but February was still "moneth 12," and even 24 March was in the old year, although the month, by anticipation of "day 25," was "moneth 1."

6. Maine and New Hampshire are treated as one because in the origin of their settlements and their political history during the period covered they were so nearly one people.

HILTON,

Edward, with his brother William and Mr. David Thompson, fishmongers from London, began a plantation at Piscataqua in 1623. [Hub.] Exhaustive search of the records of the Fishmongers' Company of London, made by the compiler in 1907, failed to find any occurrence of either of these names; but a tax-roll of the city, made in 1641, [Lay Sub. 251, 22], brought to light by Mr. Gerald Fothergill, [Extracts in Reg. LXI], gives the name of Edward Hilton in the list of fishmongers, with the memorandum, "Newe England" after it. This indicates that he had certainly been in business there and had continued the shipment and sale of fish there up to a recent date. No trace of his parish or family has been found, nor the name of his first wife. He was the leader of the plantation and received the patent for the land—The Squamscott Patent, so-called, which covered what is now known as Dover, Durham, Stratham and parts of Newington and Greenland, etc. The Council for New England, "for and in consideration that Edward Hilton and his Associates hath already at his and their own proper costs and charges transported sundry servants to plant in New England at a point called by the natives Wecanacohunt otherwise Hilton's Point, lying some two leagues from the mouth of the River Pascataquack . . . where they have already built some houses and planted corne, And for that he doth further intend by God's Divine Assistance to transport thither more people and cattle . . . a work which may especially tend to the propagation of Religion and to the great Increase of Trade," . . . convey to him "all that part of the River Pascataquack called or known by the name of Wecanacohunt or Hilton's Point . . . with the south side of the River up to the ffall of the River and three miles into the Maine land by all the breadth aforesaid" etc., etc. Possession was given in the name of the Council by Capt. Thomas Wiggin and others 7 July, 1631. [Sup. Court Files, also Reg. XXIV, 264.] Part of this land was sold to individual settlers, part to the lords Say and Brook and some N. E. gentlemen. Mr. Hilton made his home after some time at Exeter; signed petition of inhabitants in 1642. Was that year appointed by the Mass. Bay govt. one of the local associate justices of the Court, sitting with the magistrates on the highest questions and acting by themselves in cases not beyond certain limits. The Gen. Court held him to be exempt from taxation on this account in 1669. He filled many important positions and was regarded highly. He m. (2) [illegible] dau. of Mr. Alexander Shapleigh and widow of James Treworgy, q. v. He d. before March 6, 1670-1, when admin. of his estate was granted to his sons Edward, William, Samuel and Charles; the claims of two daus. were presented by Christopher Palmer. Widow's dower to be £30 per quarter.

William, came in the Fortune to Plymouth in Nov. 1621. His wife and children came in the Anne in 1623, and lands were assigned to the family that year. Mr. Hilton wrote soon after his arrival a letter of great historical and personal value which was published by Capt. John Smith in his "New England's Trialls" in the edition of 1622. The name of the person addressed has not yet been found. He tells his "Cousin" (nephew) that he "found all our friends and planters in good health" in spite of trials they had endured; the land and productions excellent; "the companie for the most part very religious, honest people; the word of God sincerely taught us every Sabbath: so that I know not anything a contented mind can here want." Adds to the account the following wish: "I desire your friendly care to send my wife and children to me where I wish all the friends I have in England." Signs himself "Your loving kinsman William Hilton." Other letters of his are extant which show him to have been well educated and eminently intelligent and well-informed. His family stayed at Plymouth after he began the plantation at Piscataqua, and the baptizing of his babe by Rev. John Lyford, a thorn in the sides of the Puritan Pilgrims, was the occasion of the banishment of the Church of England partisans from Plymouth colony to Nantasket. But the letter above quoted from is evidence that Mr. Hilton was on the best of terms with the Pilgrims. His son William, years afterward, applying for confirmation of a deed of land near the present city of Concord, N. H., from the Indian sagamore Tahanto, affirms that his father removed from Plymouth in a short time after the arrival of his mother and the children. Mr. Hilton threw his influence on the side of the Mass. Bay govt.; was appointed a commissioner for trial of cases not above 20 shillings in 1642; freeman of the colony that year; deputy to Gen. Court in 1644. He resided near his brother in the vicinity of Dover some years; then rem. to Kittery and afterward to York. Carried on a ferry; kept public house; was one of the selectmen, etc. He d. before June 30, 1656, when his widow Frances' second husband, Richard White, admin. on his estate.

A possible clue to the connections of the Hiltons with English families may be found in the fact that a suit was brought in Pisc. Court by William Hilton, 4 (2) 1642, respecting a payment to "Mr. Richard Hilton of Northwich"; Mr. Waters found a record at Wotten-under-edge, Glouc., of the baptism of a child of this man, "coming out of New England." [See The Hilton Family, by Hassam.]

SHAPLEIGH, SHAPLEY,

Alexander, merchant, from Kingsweare, co. Devon, came to the Piscataqua valley at a very early day. He is said by some writers to have been an agent of Gorges; but of this no evidence appears in our records. He carried on a large amount of fishing, trading, and his grandson, John Treworgy, called at Richmond Island in 1640, doing business in Mr. Shapleigh's name. [Trel.] He was a resident of New England when he sold to his son in law James Treworgy all his lands, boats, houses, etc. in N. E. May 26, 1642. While his dwelling may have been at Strawberry Bank, he had grants of land at Kittery; and finding that Nicholas Frost had received too little marsh for his stock of cattle, he gave him the 5 acres of marsh which had been allotted to himself. Testified 31 May, 1643. [York De. I.]

Children: i. Katherine, m. (1) James Treworgy; m. (2) Edward Hilton. She must have been much older than her brother Nicholas, as she said in a petition on his behalf to the General Court of Mass. Bay, May 7, 1674, referring, probably, to his being deprived of a mother in infancy, "I nursed him at my breast (which I canot forgett)"; she also refers to her father thus: "About 38 years since, in a time of great scarcity, our ffather laid out a good estate for the supply of this Countrey and the settling some part of it. & in a season of there want supplyed them soe reasonably with provisions, that it was thankfully receipted, & acknowledged by the authority then in being," etc. [Mass. Arch. 106.]

ii. John, who remained in England while his son John came over here and acted as agent for his grandfather; iii. Nicholas, also a merchant at Kingsweare, Devon, who came over here as early as 1641, when he bought lands, houses, fishing coast, etc. of his brother in law Treworgy. He lived at Boston and Charlestown from about 1645 till about 1648, when he was a citizen and a town officer of Kittery. He was "instrumental by an order to some of Road Iland to make seizure of certain persons" about 1674, in consequence of which he was arrested and imprisoned at Boston in 1674; and at that time his sister sent down the petition mentioned above. He was soon released. His descendants have been numerous.

THOMPSON, THOMSON, TOMPSON, TOMSON,

Mr. David, who, with the Hiltons, founded New Hampshire, was a fishmonger at London, though of Scotch birth, and came to Piscataqua in 1623 "to begin a plantation," as Hubbard tells us. The phrase implies that he had such companions and furnishings as would be adapted to shore life as well as the fishing business; probably none of the company brought their wives and children at first but had them brought over on later voyages of the ships which carried fish and other commodities back to England. Captain Thompson doubtless made many voyages across the ocean as well as coastwise. Bradford tells of his going along with some Plymouth men to "Damarinscove" to traffic for the goods of a ship-wrecked Frenchman in 1626, mentioning him as then dwelling at Piscataqua. Not far from that time he went to Boston harbor and bought an island called Trevour's Island, which was afterward called by his own name, and erected a habitation there. He died not long after that date, according to testimony given in Court when the title of the island was confirmed to the son in 1648.

He married at Plymouth, Eng. July 13, 1613, Amyas Colle (Amias Cole) who survived him and married second Mr. Samuel Maverick, who was at Boston Bay about 1625 and came into possession of the island called Noddle's Island, now East Boston. Mrs. Maverick joined her second husband in a deed in 1632; in 1633 she wrote a letter to Mr. Robert Trelawney, alluding to her first husband's friendship for him and to her "fatherless children" by Mr. Thompson. The only one of these children known to us is John,[2] who obtained the island above-mentioned after it had been in the possession of citizens of Dorchester and its income the foundation of the free school of that town in 1641. So the name of Thomson was prominent in the pioneer annals of two colonies.

It is particularly suitable that New-Hampshire people should honor the memory of this enterprising man.

Miles, Senior, carpenter, Kittery, signed the petition to Cromwell in 1657; was one of the selectmen in 1659. Bought land adjoining to some previously possessed of John Morrall, plasterer, 12 May, 1663; bought other land in partnership with Israel Hodgsden, of Abraham Tilton and Mary his wife. Deeded land Dec. 4, 1694, to sons Bartholomew and Thomas, the latter to maintain himself and his wife Ann.

Rev. William, some time curate of the church at Winwick, Eng. came to this land in 1636 or 1637. Joined the church of Dorchester, Mass. of which his friend Rev. Richard Mather was pastor. Preached a while at Accomenticus, [Kittery]; removed to Braintree, Mass. and was installed as pastor with Rev. Henry Flint as teacher, Nov. 19, 1639. He was "a very gracious, sincere man, — an instrument of much good, — a man of much faith." [W.] See P. of M.

Note. In Piscataqua Files there is a well written letter from "Sam: Thomsonn," dated at "Taunton, March, 27th, 1660," addressed to "Deare Brother & Sister." He had received letters from them 4 and 2 years since, but none this spring. They had ordered cloth of him, which was to be sent by Mr. John Payne. He had rode to Cheriton to confer with his uncle White about sending it. He now sends "3 karsyes," i. e. pieces of kersey cloth; directed to one Mr. Reynes in New England for them. He supposes that they "and all my cousins and their little ones are in good health, though my cousin William Thompson writt not a word of it." Hopes "my cousin John's children are with you, and that you are a father and mother to them." Is sorry to learn of the death of "cousin Esther." His own son Samuel is in school in Ilminster, and almost "fitt for Oxford"; his "daughter Mall is a religious and vertuous young woman."

This letter may prove very valuable as a means of discovering the relationship of several American families to their English connections. The great variety in the spelling of names at that period is here illustrated by the "Thomsonn" of the signature and the "Thompson" of a cousin's name. The "cousin William" who had recently written but failed to give all family news, calls to mind the Braintree parson, though without any real evidence of identity.

"A maid," of this name came to Richmond Island about 1639; was drowned. [Trel.]

THORPE,

WHITE, WHYTE, WHITTE, WHIT,

John, yeoman, with James Phipps, (father of Gov. William Phipps,) bought of Edward Bateman of Kennebec "a certain large tract of land near the river of Kennebec at a place called Negwusset, lying between that and the river called Munsweague which was the easterly bound; there they lived many years, built houses and otherwise improved it, and died seized of the whole except a certain neck of land called Jeremiah Squam's Neck which they sold in 1679 to Sr. Wm. Phipps."

His wife died and he m. before Oct. 4, 1679, Mary, widow of his partner James Phipps.

Sir Wm. Phipps' legatee Mary claimed the tract—"Cherysequamy neck"—"as by deed from John White and Mary his wife formerly the wife of James Phipps of Kennebeck deceased; dated Oct. 4, 1679." [Me. H. and G. Reg. VIII, 202.]

He died before 1722, when his son Peter, then of Milton, Mass. sold one half of his portion, which was two fifths of the moiety or half of the tract, to Paul Dudley. He testified to the foregoing facts and that his father had eight children of whom four had died without issue. His portion was that of the eldest son. [York Deeds XI, 15.] Perhaps Paul White, taxed at Milton, Mass. 1681-3, was another of those children. Peter gave his age as 67 in 1727, which places his birth about 1660; as William Phipps is known to have been born in 1650 we may locate the partners on the tract before that date.

John, Kittery, about 1638; servant of Alexander Shapleigh; knew of the setting of bounds between Shapleigh and Nicholas Frost at Sturgeon Creek meadow. So he deposed 19 Dec. 1662, being then about 58 years old. Deposed also in 1679. [York De. I and V.]

WIGGIN, WIGAN, WIGGINS, WIGON,

Captain, Thomas, gent. [L.] whose birth-place has eluded search, may be the person of whom Sir John Drake wrote from Barnstaple, England, Jan. 6, 1627; "Captain Thomas Wigan desires a letter of marque against the French"; this was addressed to the secretary of state, and is noted in Index to Parl. Docs. Dom. ser. Charles I, vol. XLVII, 7. But the Piscataqua man stands clearly before us as one of the witnesses to the possession of land under patent to Oldham and Vines, in Maine, 25 June, 1630. Another proof of his presence here at that time comes in the letter of John Humphrey, Esquire, one of the Massachusetts Bay company, to his brother in law, Isaac Johnson, Esquire, from London, Dec. 9, 1630: "For Mr. Wiggin & your thoughts concerning him & those who set him on worke, I think you will hear little more. Yet your letter shall be delivered, . . . I purpose this morning to goe to Mr. Downing to advise about it." [Winthrop Letters, Mass. Hist. Coll. XXXVI, 3.] The historian Hubbard says that "Bristol and Shrewsbury men" planted a colony on the upper part of the Piscataqua in 1631, "under Captain Wiggans." The Captain again witnessed the giving of possession of a patent, this time to Lewis and Bonython, in Maine, Jan. 28, 1631-2. "Captain Wiggans went back for England the next year," Hubbard continues, "and soon after returned with more ample power and means to promote what was in hand. The Bristol men had in the mean time sold their interest (which was two thirds) in the said plantation to the Lord Say and the Lord Brook, one to Mr. Willis, and Mr. Whiting, who likewise employed Captain Wiggans to act in their behalf for the space of seven years next following; the Shrewsbury men still retaining their own share. After the time was expired, the advance not being much, the whole was prised but at 600 li. and sold to Captain Wiggans; which he paid at a very easy rate, as some of his neighbors have used to say."

Captain Wiggin remained in charge of the "Dover and Squamscot" patent, including Dover, Exeter and outlying lands, till about 1639, when Rev. George Burdett, (successor of Rev. William Leverich, the first minister of the colony) worked himself into the favor of the people, and assumed control, though with no legal authority. The coming of Rev. John Wheelwright and his associates to settle Exeter, together with the agitation by Mass. Bay people of the question whether that town was not within their jurisdiction, all operated to incline the Captain toward acknowledgement of their claims; and he became the most important factor in the extension of the Mass. government over both New Hampshire and Maine. But this was no sudden freak. As far back as the year 1632 when in England on business connected with his own colony, Captain Wiggin had written two memorable letters, one to Mr. Downing, touching Sir Christopher Gardiner's fiasco and another matter of some importance to New England; the other to Sir John Cooke, principal secretary, testifying to the great value of New England as a profitable place for plantations, and especially showing the high character of Gov. John Winthrop and the people of "the Mattachusetts." [Mass. Hist. Coll. 3d. S., VIII.]

This testimony was given at a critical moment in the affairs of the Bay colony. Gov. Winthrop, in his History, thus describes it: "Feb. 22, 1632-3, .. We had intelligence from our friends in England that Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Captain Mason (upon the instigation of Sir Christopher Gardiner, Morton and Ratcliffe,) had preferred a petition to the lords of the privy council against us, charging us with many false accusations; but through the Lord's good providence and the care of our friends in England, (especially Mr. Emanuel Downing who had married the governor's sister,) and the good testimony given on our behalf by one Capt. Wiggin, who dwelt at Pascataquack and had been divers times among us, their malicious practice took not effect."

The friendly service thus voluntarily rendered by Capt. Wiggin was never forgotten. And when Massachusetts needed a man to superintend the pacification of the colonists about the Piscataqua and along the coast of Maine, they naturally turned to him. He was commissioned first as an Assistant, then as a presiding judge, then as commissioner for adjustment of all manner of problems arising in the assumption of authority in new plantations. It is fair to say that he was the most important man in the whole business of uniting the colonies of upper New England.

He was also a deputy to the Gen. Court at Boston, and in his magisterial capacity performed the marriage ceremony, attested documents, etc. in Massachusetts as well as in New Hampshire and Maine. He had grants of land from the Gen. Court in addition to what he had recd. from the Patentees and had purchased. He carried on milling and farming operations. 23 May, 1656, "Captain Wiggan, having been imployed by the Gen[ll] Court with other gent., to bring in the easterne plantations, as a gratuitie in respect of his service, hath the grant of two hundred acors of land uppon the river that leads up to Cochechawicke," etc. The committee appointed to lay out his tract reported April 28, 1659, that they had laid it out "near the head of the littell river caled the back river."

He and his son Thomas sold land April 25, 1662; he made a power of attorney to Thomas March 21, 1662-3. With wife Katharine he gave a marriage portion to son Andrew 4 June, 1663. The 30th of that month he attended court for the last time; a year later he was unable even to reach the "ordinary" without help, as a neighbor testified who had failed to reach his place in the grand jury that day by reason of assisting "his worp." i. e. "his worship," the title of the magistrate.

He kept his lands apart from any town association many years, holding aloof from participation in town meetings or in the support of the ministry or other public affairs; probably deeming his state duties and charges heavy enough, and owning a tract large enough to constitute a "plantation" of itself. But at length public opinion prevailed against him, and he became a tax-payer in Exeter.

He married Katharine —, who may have been a sister of Mr. William Whiting of Hartford, one of the proprietors of the Squamscot patent. At all events, Mr. Whiting made a bequest "to my sister Wiggen 5 li. and unto her children 3 li. apiece" in his will dated March 20, 1643. Children, Thomas, Andrew, Mary, all bapt. at Hampton Sept. 20, 1641. The latter married George Vesey.

He made will 16 June, 1664, which was probated in Hampton court in "1666." He bequeathed to his wife Katherine certain articles and whatever debts were due him and all goods not heretofore or herein given; certain bequests to sons Andrew and Thomas who have already had their portions, and to daugher Mary, for whom 150 pounds had been previously set apart in the deed to Andrew.

WINTER,

John, mariner, of Plymouth, England, deserves to be honored as one of the most efficient and persevering pioneers who came forth from old England in the seventeenth century. Intense in his convictions, severe in his antagonisms, rugged in manners, he was yet deeply devoted to what he regarded as the principles of divine and human right.

Mr. Robert Trelawney, holding a patent for the island which had somehow received the name "Richman" or "Richmond" Island, remained in Plymouth to receive whatever profits could be made from the land and water over which he had received control; but Mr. John Winter, who had passed that apprenticeship of years by which alone a man in those days could be termed "mariner," bade adieu to the easy life of home and sailed across the ocean, then so broad — and toiled at the head of a band of toilers. He not only superintended the fishing operations, by which several ships a year were laden and sent home; he also looked to the cultivation of the soil on the island and ashore, training many men for their own farming, and making that island the nursery of Maine's grand husbandry and the pioneer shipyard of the state. More; he and Trelawney corresponded in a style that shows the good business habits of both; and the letters thus written form the first book of real history of the people of "The Pine Tree State."

Right here let respect be paid to that citizen of Maine, Mr. James Phinney Baxter, by whose scholarly research and munificent use of well-earned wealth these "Trelawney Papers" were brought out of their hiding in England and placed in fitting form before historical students; and let passing tribute be given to the Maine Historical Society, whose Collections, so rich in treasures of this class, have embraced this remarkably valuable compilation.

John Winter received a power of attorney with Thomas Pomery 18 Jan. 1631, and in the summer following, — July 21 and 30, 1632, he received possession of the Casco land and islands from Richard Vines. His letters extant begin 11 July, 1633; but he had been here before, as we must infer from many notes in the letters and accounts. Really the year 1630 may be taken as the beginning of Winter's operations on this coast, probably.

He left his family in England at first; asked Mr. Trelawney to pay money to his wife and daughter Mary Coulinge; referred to his daughter Sarah. Mrs. Winter and Sarah came over in 1639. He drew on Trelawney 15 June, 1642, for 15 li. to be paid to his daughter Mary Hooper, to whom he wrote 13 June, 1644; tells of the marriage of daughter Sarah to Rev. Robert Jordan 5 months before; mentions his son John Winter, and tells of receiving a letter from him since he came from the East India to England.
